Ramona’s Family

“Too bad about him.” Mr. Quimby blew a cloud of smoke toward the ceiling. 13

“He goes next door and mews as if we never give him anything to eat,” said Beezus. 29

“It’s embarrassing.” 31

“He’ll just have to learn to eat what we can afford,” said Mr. Quimby. “Or we will get 48 rid of him.” 51

This statement shocked Ramona. Picky-picky had been a member of the family since 62
before she was born. 66

“Well, I don’t blame him,” said Beezus, picking up the cat and pressing her cheek against 81
his fur. “Puss-putty stinks.” 84

Mr. Quimby ground out his cigarette. 89

“Guess what?” said Mrs. Quimby, as if to change the subject. “Howie’s grandmother 100 drove out to visit her sister, who lives on a farm, and her sister sent in a lot of pumpkins for jack- 122 o’-lanterns for the neighborhood children. Mrs. Kemp gave us a big one, and it’s down in the 138 basement now, waiting to be carved. 144

“Me! Me!” cried Ramona. “Let me get it!” 151

“Let’s give it a real scary face,” said Beezus, no longer difficult. 162

“I’ll have to sharpen my knife,” said Mr. Quimby. 170

“Run along and bring it up, Ramona,” said Mrs. Quimby with a real smile. 182

Relief flooded through Ramona. Her family had returned to normal. She snapped on the 195 basement light, thumped down the stairs, and there in the shadow of the furnace pipes, which 211 reached out like ghostly arms, was a big, round pumpkin. Ramona grasped its scratchy stem, 225 found the pumpkin too big to lift that way, bent over, hugged it in both arms, and raised it from 245 the cement floor. The pumpkin was heavier than she had expected, and she must not let it drop 263 and smash all over the concrete floor. 270
