present-day emissions

hypothetical adult emissions

There are significant differences between my present day emission and my hypothetical adult emissions, One difference is that of my transportation emissions. As an adult I would probably drive an electric car, so there would be no emissions. However, the household emissions increased because I would want to live in a single home, so there would be more emissions than if I lived in a dorm. I would also want to travel more, but as I would probably travel as a group with my family, the travel emissions would be decreased.
